“ My little cousin who I grew up with like he was that pesky little brother. I have told my kids the story of the 4th of July when I kept telling him to stop putting firecrackers in the ant hole. “K” as we called him, thought I was being soft. But that day, we learned karma. I lit a jumping jack, not knowing which direction it would go. Low and behold, it goes up K’s shorts and burn his inner thigh. I knew we were in trouble. Luckily all that happened was the fireworks were taken from us until later that evening. I promise, I was scared of them since then. I love you K. Continue to rest in God’s arms.
