

Gracie Mae Horton

May 9, 1951 - December 21, 2019

Gracie Mae Horton was born in Memphis Tn, May 9, 1951 to the late Joe Smith and late Evelena Hill. She was preceded in death by her husband Andrew Horton and her siblings Clark Gable Hill, Robert Lee Hill, and Joyce Ann Hill.

She was an active member of Bethel Temple Church and she also faithfully served as a missionary. She was hardworking and loving person. She loved and lived her faith in God more than anything.

Missionary Gracie Horton joined Bethel Temple Church in 1987 under the leadership of Dr. Jonathan Rodgers and was an example of faithfulness and loyalty to the ministry until her death. She was a woman of faith and had a profound love for the Word of God. She studied the Word and would look for books and references that she could use to enhance her knowledge of Scripture. She was a persevering individual and would seldom let anything or anybody hinder her from serving the church and others to the best of her calling and ability.

Missionary Horton would boldly and courageously let her convictions be known about her love and devotion to her Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. And, her life abounded with testimonies that she would share with the saved and the unsaved. She often invited people to join her in worship during church services and they would attend.

There are many who recognize Missionary Horton as a “spiritual mother” because she introduced them to the Word of God and Christ, and as a result they surrendered their lives to the Lord because of her witness.

Missionary Horton had a passion for souls, and no one met her and left without a “witness.” She wanted to share the love of God with people everywhere she went and would let them know, as she would put it, “If He did for me, he can do for you!

Missionary Horton served as a member of several ministries within the church; Missionary Board, Prison Ministry, Witnessing and Tract Outreach, Prison Ministry, Nursing Home Ministry and often volunteered her services to help maintain the facility. She would also help other churches with their outreach ministries and programs because she believed that “we are helpers one to another.”

She leaves behind her four children: Her daughter Toya Hill. Her sons Corey Leon Kilpatrick, Sammy Kilpatrick, Cleon Kilpatrick. She also left three sisters Erma Turner, Inez Hill, and Betty Hill. She also left a host of grandchildren nieces and nephews.
